SCENARIO:

Secretary will be met at front door of the Stock Exchange by his Chinese hosts, Managing Director TU Guangshao and Executive Vice President James LIU. Hosts will lead Secretary to a holding room just above the Stock Exchange Floor.

The Secretary and Mr. Tu will exchange pleasantries for approximately 15 minutes.

At the end of pleasantries, the Secretary will present Mr. Tu with a gift. Mr. Tu will reciprocate. After gift exchange, members of delegation will be led to Stock Exchange Floor. The Secretary, the Ambassador, and Mr. Tu will remain for a few moments to prepare for the speech.

Just before 1600, Secretary and the Ambassador will be led onto Stock Exchange Floor by Managing Director TU.

BIOS: Tu, Guangshao: Mr. Tu holds two titles concurrently. He is President of the Shanghai Stock exchange as well as Secretary General of the China Securities Regulatory Commission. He has held the position of President since 1997. He was Secretary General from 1995-1997, then resumed that role again at the end of last year. Mr. Tu's has a degree in Economics, and has served as a government bureaucrat and regulator since 1984, including a stint at the People's Bank of China. It has been rumored for more than a year that Mr. Tu would leave his post at the Exchange, but despite the fact that he is again Secretary General, a successor has not been named.

Mr. Tu has been to the States several times, most recently to make a presentation at Harvard University about China's capital markets. Mr. Tu speaks English moderately well, and we have found him to be a very affable interlocutor.

(b)(6)

History of the Exchange: Like most of the buildings surrounding it in the Pudong Liujiazui financial district, the stock exchange is newly built, completed in December of 1997. The building, with a hollow center, was designed to resemble an ancient Chinese coin. The trading floor is the largest in Asia and can accommodate 1300 traders. All trading is done electronically through a trading system provided by Hewlett-Packard

The Shanghai Securities Exchanges was established in 1990. It is one of two exchanges in China. A-Shares, reserved for domestic investors, and B-shares for foreigners are traded on the exchange. While the exchange is small by international standards (capitalization of $193 billion at the end of 1999), its size belies its key role as a catalyst for reform. China's fledgling capital markets play an increasingly important role in meeting the goals of ownership diversification, privatization, enterprise reform, and valuing assets on a market basis. Nearly 20 million individuals own shares in the market, and playing the market is a popular activity among local Shanghainese. The A-share market has done particularly well in 2000, hitting several record highs, while the U.S. dollar denominated B-share market has remained unattractive to international institutional investors because of illiquidity. The At the end of 1999, 460 companies were listed on the exchange

Historic Tour of Shanghai Friday, 14 July, 1350-1540

Purpose:

See historic and modern Shanghai by car and foot, as weather and time permit.

Contact:

Tess Johnston, perhaps the leading expert on Shanghai's pre-

Chinese Revolution architecture.

Scenario:

Tess will lead you on a tour of one or more of the "four Shanghais," depending on time and preference. Could begin with an optional lecture at the Old China Hand Reading Room, then proceed to:

French Concession

Drive through the streets of Old Frenchtown. Tess points out old villas, stops by a few of them, and relates a bit of their history and anecdotes. Then proceed to Old Town.

Old Town (Cheng Huang Miao)

Drive around the Old Town on the circular road as Tess points out historic and interesting buildings. Optional stop by outdoor antique market. Then drive to waterfront.

The Bund and Suzhou Creek, Consular Row Area

Drive to Friendship Store parking lot and debark. Walk down the Bund as Tess identifies old buildings. Then walk the historic area along Suzhou Creek, as she points out Consular Row, the Astor House, Broadway Mansions, old Post Office, Capitol theatre, etc. Then return to bus via a walk down Museaum Road (Huqiu Lu) and view old buildings. Then drive through:

The Hongkou District

View old Jewish ghetto area, Ward Road Jail, Yangpu Bridge, the International Ship Terminal, and the Bund.
